traces the history of black men in america using a tough guy image to obscure their anger and disappointment over their roles in society back to their origins in africa and the slave era deindustrialization white flight and inner city poverty have spelled trouble for baltimore schools marion orr now examines why school reform has been difficult to achieve there revealing the struggles of civic leaders and the limitations placed on baltimore s african american community as each has tried to rescue a failing school system examining the interplay between government and society orr presents the first systematic analysis of social capital both within the african american community black social capital and outside it where social capital crosses racial lines orr shows that while black social capital may have created solidarity against white domination in baltimore it hampered african american leaders capacity to enlist the cooperation from white corporate elites and suburban residents needed for school reform orr examines social capital at the neighborhood level in elite level interactions and in intergovernmental relations to argue that black social capital doesn t necessarily translate into the kind of intergroup coalition needed to bring about school reform he also includes an extensive historical survey of the black community showing how distrust engendered by past black experiences has hampered the formation of significant intergroup social capital the book features case studies of school reform activity including the first analysis of the politics surrounding baltimore s decision to hire a private for profit firm to operate nine of its public schools these cases illuminate the paradoxical aspects of black social capital in citywide school reform while offering critical perspectives on current debates about privatization site based management and other reform alternatives orr s book challenges those who argue that social capital alone can solve fundamentally political problems by purely social means and questions the efficacy of either privatization or black community power to reform urban schools black social capital offers a cogent conceptual synthesis of social capital theory and urban regime theory that demonstrates the importance of government politics and leadership in converting social capital into a resource that can be mobilized for effective social change this volume is designed to illuminate the educational experiences of black women from the time they earn their high school diplomas through graduate study with a particular focus on their doctoral studies by exploring the commonalities and the uniqueness of their individual paths and challenges the chapters of this volume newly identify key factors and experiences that shape black women s engagement or disengagement with higher education the original research presented here using an array of theoretical lenses as well as qualitative and quantitative methods not only deepens our understanding of the experiences of african american women in the academy but also seeks to strengthen the academic pipeline not only for the benefit of those who may have felt disenfranchised in the past but for all students the contributors eschew the deficit focused approach that implies a lack of social and cultural capital based on prior educational experiences adopted by many studies of non dominant groups in education and instead focus on the strengths and experiences of their subjects among their findings is the identification of the social capital that black women are given and actively acquire in their pre collegiate years that enable them to gain greater returns on their educational investments than their male peers the book further describes the assistance and the interference african american women receive from their peers during their transition to college and how peer interactions shape their early college experiences and influence subsequent persistence decisions whether studying how black women in the social and natural sciences navigate through this often rocky terrain or uncovering the extent to which african american women doctoral students access postsecondary education through community colleges and their special needs for more mentoring and advising support this book provides researchers and graduate students with rich information on how to successfully engage and succeed in the doctoral process it also demonstrates to women faculty and administrators how
