across the united states tens of millions of people are working forty or more hours a week and living in poverty this is surprising in a country where politicians promise that anyone who does their share and works hard will get ahead in ending poverty as we know it william quigley argues that it is time to make good on that promise by adding to the constitution language that insures those who want to work can do so and at a wage that enables them to afford reasonable shelter clothing and food this is the first parliamentary debate textbook for secondary school students the text is designed to provide a theoretical and practical foundation for effective participation in parliamentary debate in competition or in the classroom

this law school casebook approaches its subject from a public law perspective the key question is whether the executive the legislature or the judiciary should make a given decision or perhaps whether the good or service at issue should be provided by government at all in order to explore this question the authors go beyond case law to integrate learning from other disciplines ranging from public finance to political philosophy
