before his death in 2003 bernard williams planned to publish a collection of historical essays focusing primarily on the ancient world this posthumous volume brings together a much wider selection written over some forty years his legacy lives on in this masterful work the first collection ever published of williams s essays on the history of philosophy the subjects range from the sixth century b c to the twentieth a d from homer to wittgenstein by way of socrates plato aristotle descartes hume sidgwick collingwood and nietzsche often one would be hard put to say which part is history which philosophy both are involved throughout because this is the history of philosophy written philosophically historical exposition goes hand in hand with philosophical scrutiny insights into the past counteract blind acceptance of present assumptions in his touching and illuminating introduction myles burnyeat writes of these essays they show a depth of commitment to the history of philosophy seldom to be found nowadays in a thinker so prominent on the contemporary philosophical scene the result celebrates the interest and importance to philosophy today of its near and distant past the sense of the past is one of three collections of essays by bernard williams published by princeton university press since his death in the beginning was the deed realism and moralism in political argument selected edited and with an introduction by geoffrey hawthorn and philosophy as a humanistic discipline selected edited and with an introduction by a w moore make up the trio in recent years history has been increasingly popularized through television docudramas history museums paperback historical novels grassroots community history projects and other public representations of historical knowledge this collection of lively and accessible essays is the first examination of the rapidly growing field called public history based in part on articles written for the radical history review these eighteen original essays take a sometimes irreverent look at how history is presented to the public in such diverse settings as children s books colonial williamsburg and the statue of liberty presenting the past is organized into three areas which consider the role of mass media packaging the past the affects of applied history professionalizing the past and the importance of grassroots efforts to shape historical consciousness politicizing the past the first section examines the large scale production and dissemination of popular history by mass culture the contributors criticize many of these hollywood and madison avenue productions that promote historical amnesia or affirm dominant values and institutions in professionalizing the past the authors show how non university based professional historians have also affected popular historical consciousness through their work in museums historic preservation corporations and government agencies finally the book considers what has been labeled people s history oral history projects slide shows films and local exhibits and assesses its attempts to reach such diverse constituents as workers ethnic groups women and gays of essential interest to students of history presenting the past also explains to the general reader how americans have come to view themselves their ancestors and their heritage through the influence of mass media popular culture and public history author note susan porter benson is associate professor and chair of history at bristol community college in massachusetts stephen brier is director of the american social history project and senior research scholar at the graduate center city university of new york roy rosenzweig is associate professor of history and director of the oral history program at george mason university in virginia this collection of essays concentrates on the structures and connections which have made it possible over the last two centuries for an integrated regime of historical representation to emerge it also touches upon the debate about the contemporary uses of history whether it is a matter of new versus traditional approaches to the school curriculum or of the need to historicize museums houses and gardens and so avoid the blandness of an uninformed display grammar a friendly approach is a light hearted and engaging introduction to grammar this my second volume of essays on history primarily covers the early modern and modern periods from the sixteenth through to the mid twentieth century focusing on issues in britain and france the opening chapter considers how the study of history and its rationale has changed in the decades since i first put pen to paper on the subject this is followed by an essay on ecclesiastical history in scandinavia when it transitioned from paganism to christianity in the tenth and eleventh centuries chapters 3 5 look at aspects of early modern society chapter 3 considers the paradoxes polarities and ambiguities and was written as the opening talk at a conference on shakespeare in history in the late 1990s chapters 4 and 5 were written in the spring of 1972 on sixteenth century educational thinking in england and france the remaining nine essays are concerned with modern history on british history chapter 6 considers migration to and from britain from the 1780s to the post war period chapters 7 and 8 consider two aspects of chartism first in an extensive essay on wales and then the isle of man and france the following four essays have a feminist focus this is part of the two jewish essays that form chapter 9 the following two chapters consider the militancy of the suffrage movement especially amongst suffragettes through the events and results of the 1913 derby and the contentious question of prison and force feeding chapter 12 looks at two aspects of women s suffrage and cultural expression especially the uses of art in the cause of suffrage the final two chapters examine the impact of the first world war on the reconstruction of education and housing in the inter war period a recent trend in contemporary western political theory is to criticize it for implicitly trying to conquer displace or moralize politics james wiley s book takes the next step from criticizing contemporary political theory to showing what a more politics centered political theory would look like by exploring the meaning and value of politics in the writings of max weber carl schmitt paul ricoeur hannah arendt sheldon wolin claude lefort and ernesto laclau and chantal mouffe these political theorists all use the concept of the political to explain the value of politics and defend it from its detractors they represent state centered republic centered and society centered conceptions of politics as well as realist authoritarian idealist republican populist and radical democratic traditions of political thought this book compares these theorists and traditions of the political in order to defend politics from its critics and to contribute to the development of a politics centered political theory politics and the concept of the political will be a useful resource to general audiences as well as to specialists in political theory
